

James Wood

“Leadership can be thought of as a capacity to define oneself to others in a way that clarifies and expands a vision of the future.”

James Wood is a leadership/performance consultant and leadership/success coach based in Denver, Colorado. He has over twenty-five years of diverse leadership experience with project management, software development, engineering, operations and training organizations. He is passionate about utilizing brain-based, results-focused techniques to coach individuals realize their personal greatness. To that end, he is ardently driven toward teaching, inspiring, and guiding others in discovering methods that lead to fulfilling and enriched personal and professional lives.

James began his career as a unionized technician for a US government contractor. In that job, he worked his way up the leadership ranks, from first-line supervisor to the senior director of a large, highly technical operations, engineering, and scientific organization. James has significant leadership experience in the Information Technology sector as well.

James holds a Doctor of Business Administration degree from the University of Phoenix School of Advanced Studies along with a Masters Degree in Computer Information Systems from Regis University and a Masters Degree in Environmental Policy and Management from the University of Denver. Additionally, he earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration: Management from Regis University.

James is certified as a Project Management Professional (PMP) through the Project Management Institute. He holds extensive experience in leading technical, multicultural, and virtual organizations.

He possesses significant experience in leadership development, executive coaching, team building, and personal/professional growth development.

James is an Adjunct Professor of Business for four different universities and often speaks on issues of leadership trust and leadership greatness.

James lives in Westminster, Colorado. He has two adult children – his daughter is a teacher in Oahu, Hawaii and his son is an airline pilot based in Denver. James enjoys golfing, sailing, flying his 1967 Piper Comanche airplane, and spending quality time with his family and friends.
